AMENDMENT TO INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILLS

Washington, June 10.—The senate Indian Affairs Committee today agreed upon an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill, which would require a complete investigation of all expenditures of the Indian Bureau; a detailed accounting for every cent spent of the $10,000,000 or more to be appropriated for the coming year, and revolutionize the method of administering Indian trust funds and annual appropriations in the future.

Another amendment agreed to by the committee, to prohibit any contracts with Indians relating to tribal funds or property in the hands of the government, unless authorized by the United States, is expected to materially affect many contracts made with Cherokee and Chickasaw Indians by James F. McMurray of Oklahoma. It was asserted by Senator Ashhurst before the senate lobby committee last week that McMurray's contracts carrying a 10 per cent contingent fee would have netted him $3,500,000. Members of the committee were not certain tonight to what extent the contracts would be affected.

The provision for a detailed accounting of all Indian funds is the result of persistent demands by members of the committee for information as to how the "lump sum" Indian funds were expended. Senator Lane of Oregon Saturday threatened to oppose the present bill unless such detailed information was produced.

A member of the President's Economy and Efficiency Commission, with Senators Lane, Owen and Townsend, prepared the amendment requiring detailed accounting of Indian affairs in the future.

Medical Society's 132d Anniversary.

Boston, Mass., June 10.—The celebration of the 132d anniversary of its foundation is one of the leading features of the meeting of the Massachusetts Medical Society, which opened here today at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, to remain in session for two days. This morning there were clinics at the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and separate meetings of the supervisors and of the council. In the afternoon sections meetings were held and the annual meeting will be held tomorrow morning. At noon tomorrow Dr. Homer Gage of Worcester will deliver the annual discourse and in the afternoon a combined meeting of the sections of Medicine and Surgery will be held. The program will close with the annual dinner in the Copley-Plaza ball room.

Spanish War Veterans at Waterloo.

Waterloo, Ia., June 10.—The city is gaily decorated with flags in honor of the Spanish-American war veterans who opened their annual state convention here today. The meeting will last two days and while the forenoons will be devoted to the transaction of the regular convention business, there will be many entertainment features to fill out the rest of the two days.

J. W. Montgomery of Nimrod, Tex., who has been visiting his son, Commissioner G. W. Montgomery, left this morning for Wagoner to visit another son.

OKLAHOMA AT SAN FRANCISCO EXPOSITION

Oklahoma City, June 9.—The proposition to organize a representation for Oklahoma at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco in 1915, is meeting with tremendous response over the balance of the legislature to make an appropriation for the purpose, the citizens of the state became interested in the organization of the independent movement to raise $100,000 for the purpose of installing an Oklahoma exhibit and erecting a substantial building. The Oklahoma City Advertising Club took the matter up with the Governor, the various Commercial Clubs of the state, and other interests representing the welfare of Oklahoma and have secured, without exception, their endorsement and approval.

A Commission composed of Walter Ferguson of Cherokee, E. G. Bayless of Claremore, and Mrs. Fred Sutton of Oklahoma City, was selected and this commission has opened offices in the Majestic building, and the campaign to insure the Oklahoma representation at the Worlds Fair has commenced with vigor, and is meeting with flattering response.

Plans are not definitely outlined, but one offer that came the next day after public announcement was made of the intended effort, was from the Cleveland Vitreous Brick Company, tendering fifty thousand bricks which will be sold to the citizens of the state as a basis of subscription. A happy scheme has been agreed upon to use these bricks in the construction of a permanent domicile for the Oklahoma Historical Society and the wonderful assortment of archaize that has been collected. The name of every contributor will be placed on the brick, and the building when completed will be of historical interest. It is figured by the members of the Commission and others interested in the proposition, that these bricks will meet with ready sale when they are placed on the market.

It is well known to the citizens of Oklahoma, that the Oklahoma and Indian Territory exhibit at the World's fair at St. Louis, was the means of bringing about statehood. Such a splendid show of the resources of the twin territories was given to the world, that it automatically organized a public demand for the admission of the 46th state.

Business and professional men who see far into the future, see in the possibilities of the Panama-Pacific Exposition a chance to recruit Oklahoma citizenship with homeseekers to attract capital to develop the latent resources and to insure further interest in the great possibilities of the state.

The first advertising feature proposed and executed by the new commission, is that of offering a free trip to the Exposition with all expenses paid, for the editor who writes the best editorial concerning the project. This trip will also include the editors' wife. A number of newspaper men of the state have heartily approved the plans, and the commission figures that with the newspapers of the state behind the project, nothing can prevent its success.

Offices of the Oklahoma Commission have been opened in the Majestic Building at Oklahoma City, where Mr. Roy C. Oakes, is secretary in charge and who will answer communications concerning the movement.

Strawn Kidd, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Y. Kidd, was born June 20, 1904, died May 26, 1913.

Strawn was a most excellent boy, kind and considerate above the average boy. He was given to religious thought and gave his boyish heart to Christ and during his long and painful sickness (nearly one hundred days) he often tried to sing and pray. The last song he tried to sing was a part of the chorus of "Down at the Cross." There to my heart was the Blood Applied, Glory to His Name. Strawn's body rests in the Lehigh

MINNESOTA WINS

RAILROAD RATE CASE

Washington, June 9.—The state of Minnesota won a substantial victory in the Supreme Court today when, in the Minnesota rate case, Justice Hughes, for the court, held that the rates of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad were confiscatory and unconstitutional, but that the rates of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern were valid.

The decision was a victory for the state of Minnesota and upon the confiscatory features with the exception of the portion affecting the Minneapolis and St. Louis.

In effect, the Supreme Court's decision upholds the right of the Minnesota commission and the legislature to prescribe a passenger rate of 2c a mile and a maximum freight rate, provided always those rates are not confiscatory.

Gathering of Kentucky Club Women

Middlesboro, Ky., June 10 — Delegates and alternates representing womens clubs in nearly every section of this state are gathering here to attend the four days' convention of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs which will be formally opened here this evening in the assembly hall of the public school building. Among the guests of honor who will address the convention are Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, of Austin, Tex., the president of the General Federation, and Mrs. Samuel B. Sneath, of Tiffin, Ohio, the second vice-president of the General Federation. The program includes many addresses upon vital and interesting subjects by men and women of note.

"JUDGE NOT."

If we knew the cares and trials,
Knew the efforts all in vain,
And in the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain,
Would the grim eternal roughness
Seem—I wonder—just the same?
Should we help where now we hinder?
Should we pity where we blame?

—Kipling.

One of the greatest faults of humanity is the forming of opinions too hastily and expressing them, without due consideration of the effect they may have. Human nature is essentially the same now that it has always been. Even in the days of the great Galilean prophet some said of him, "He is of God," while others said, "He hath a devil." Some said He cast out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils, while others said He did it through the power of God. This proneness to judge others seems to be a universal fault, and it is a most grievous one. The formation of an opinion as to the character of men would not of itself be so bad were it not expressed to others, which tends in a greater or less degree to wary their opinions to an extent quite often the opposite of what they would otherwise have been. The great Apostle who "sat at the feet of Gamaliel" said, "Why dost thou judge thy brother?" * * * Every one of us shall give an account of himself to God. The pronouncement of judgment upon any one without due investigation is sheer wickedness. It comes from a heart that is not well filled with love for God and man. As Tupper says, "God will not love thee less because men love thee more." This statement is well founded. Wood tells us another truth, "In proportion as we send out love we receive it." It is logical to conclude, then, that he who has the love of men has manifested love toward them, and like Abou Ben Adhem, his name "leads all the rest." As we therefore have opportunity, let us do good unto all men.

When we realize that we are so often wrong in our opinions of others, and also that it so frequently happens that offense is given when none is intended, we find that the belittling and minimizing of the good traits of others has little foundation, for then it is plainly seen that their faults are really few. Some one has said that "it is the weakness of the weak to give offense where none is merited and to take offense where none is intended." This sentence is found in a Buddhist rosary: "One may conquer a thousand men in battle, but he who conquers himself alone is the greatest victor;" and he who conquers the sin of judging others, their motives and aims, has won a great victory. One whose name we do not recall says:

Five things observe with care—
Of whom you speak,
To whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.

It is an awful thing, one most terrible in its consequences, to put a bad thought in the place of a good one, whether in one's own mind or that of some one else. "Thoughts are things," and life is made up of them. How necessary therefore that they be pure and good, and freighted with love! Thoughts that are pure will without effort fit themselves into speech that is pure." George McDonald writes:

Things can never go badly wrong
If the heart is true and the love is strong.

And Emerson gives a companion thought in this:

He that feeds men serveth few;
He serves all who dares be true.

These thoughts are as true as any fact can be. They are not susceptible of questioning. Men are parted from friends of long standing, even from childhood friends, by the expressed opinion of one who has known them probably only a short time, and who has not had opportunity to know whereof he speaks. "O man of God * * * follow after righteousness, * * * faith, love, patience, meekness," for "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world." Most of the deficiencies of men would be overcome if they would only take the time to consider, and to exercise their consciences in everything. "Trust no man in anything who has not a conscience in everything." Kipling in the same poem from which we quote at the beginning of this article says:

Could we judge all deeds by motives
That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we should find it nobler,
Purer than we judge we should,
And we'd love each other better
If we only understood.

It is a very easy matter to give advice when we don't know the circumstances; to pronounce upon and judge character without knowing the heart-aches, the sorrows, the influences being brought to bear, the real motives of those judged. Men find in others just what they look for, and if they are inclined to look for foibles, faults and frailties they will find them; if they seek those things which are good and true they will likely find them. The thoughts of their own hearts judge the thoughts in the hearts of others. Alice Carey says:

Do not look for wrong and evil—
You will find them if you do;
As you measure for your neighbor
He will measure back to you.
Look for goodness, look for gladness
You will meet them all the while;
If you bring a smiling visage
To the glass, you meet a smile.

"God's benison go with you, and with those who would make good of bad, and friends of foes."—Dallas News.

We beg to dissent from the proposition that it is necessary for a man to have enemies in order for him ever to amount to anything in this world. —Waxahachie Light.

Not absolutely necessary, but somehow or other the most successful men of the times have them; and generally they are men who are not successful themselves.—Fort Worth Record.

The Democrat is opposed to the abolishment of any of our state institutions. We may have more than are really needed just at present, but we have them on hand and our population is increasing at a marvelous rate and we will soon need every one we have. Forward should be our watchword and not backward. We have men in our state who believe in the old primitive methods and think we should still use Smith's grammar and the Old Blue Back Speller. These are the ones who are attempting to abolish our grand educational institutions.—Sulphur Democrat.

Good for you Brother Schenck, You are alright.—Idabel Beacon-Times.

The English suffragette who was hurt while grabbing at one of the king's race horses going at full speed in the derby race has died from her injuries. This is just another instance in which a human life has been needlessly sacrificed because of fanaticism on some question of the day. The woman had evidently brooded on the real and fancied wrongs of her sex until it overshadowed everything else and life seemed hardly worth the living because her desire to attain the end sought in the present crusade was unattainable. It was devotion to a cause carried to an extreme. She is now hailed by her companions as a martyr to a holy cause, and will be canonized by them as a saint. However, has the cause been advanced a single foot by this needless and reckless sacrifice of herself? Probably not. People may heave a sigh of regret that any one would thus throw away her life, but few indeed will feel any more favorably disposed towards the movement for woman suffrage. In America the women of ten states have been enfranchised, but their victory was a peaceable one and had they resorted to such tactics as have been used in England, the chances are that there would be no such thing on the continent as woman suffrage.

Little Thelma Rich Passes Away.

Monday evening at 7:30 Thelma Rich, the year-old daughter of C. E. Rich died of paralysis. The funeral services were held this afternoon at 1:30 by Rev. M. B. Molloy, and the little body was laid to rest in Rosedale cemetery.

Misfortune seldom comes singly, and in the present instance the father is bowed under the double burden of grief for his wife who died only a few days ago and the child who follows so soon afterwards. The News extends its deepest sympathy.

Until a very few years ago there were very few summer schools where teachers could attend and advance themselves in their profession. There was but one thing to do and that was try to save enough to attend a school for the entire term, or else go to some short summer normal where the central idea was to prepare for an examination for certificates rather than any advancement in studies. Now however, all is changed. Most of the state schools, colleges and universities conduct summer terms that entitle the students to credit on their diplomas. They can advance and not lose any time from their regular work. The new system certainly has some great possibilities.

Hockaday Talks to Peach Growers.

Guthrie, Ok., June 8.—R. W. Hockaday of St. Louis, industrial agent for the Katy Railroad, addressed the Logan County Peach Growers Friday on what to do to be saved. One hundred Elberta peach growers were present, including those who own the greatest acreage, and the county president, Fred Madden of the Fair Valley neighborhood, presided. The county organization had invited Mr. Hockaday to visit Guthrie and address them.

Complete and systematic organization, and then stick by that organization, was the advice of the Katy commissioner. In no other way possible, he declared can the Logan county peach growers, or of any other locality, win. He believed growers might work along individually for maybe three years, but in the long run they would fail.

Mr. Hockaday told of visiting the great fruit empire in the Northwest, where principally apples are grown. He went at the request of the Katy Railroad to learn their system whereby they got top prices when apples from other states were not selling. "I found," he told the Logan County growers, "that they were so thoroughly organized and had achieved such a reputation for excellency of fruit that it is now easy sailing for them. Provide a high standard for peaches from this county, adhere to that standard, and in the long run it will mean the successful marketing of your crop in the quickest and easiest manner."

The speaker advised the growers to employ only experts in caring for the trees and also to superintend the packing of the fruit for market. "You will never realize how little you do know about packing peaches for market until you see a man pack them that does know how," he told the assembled farmers, and the employment of an expert packer he declared to be one of the shortest cuts to the best market. He advised, also, the employment of a selling agent, a man who knows how, and he declared the man a fool who will consign his crop to any one market or to any one man in a market. "You have got to have a man who knows how to get to the best market and where to find it." The key to the whole situation he declared to be organization.

The Logan county peach growers shipped 700 cars of Elbertas from this county last season, but no big money was made. This season there will be about half a crop.

W. H. Perkinson, former superintendent of Ada waterworks, has come into the limelight on account of his remarkable recovery from a two weeks spell of hiccoughs. Physicians were unable to do anything for him and finally some one suggested that as a last resort to save his life beer should be given him. It is said to have worked like a charm and his recovery was rapid. This should stimulate both the beer trade and also the hiccoughs in various individuals. It will also be a powerful argument in the next effort to repeal prohibition.

THERMOMETER TAKES DROP TO 55

H. P. Sugg, the local weather observer, reports that the low mark of the thermometer Monday night was 55 degrees.

During the past three days coats have been very much the fashion and the temperature was such as to suggest that the north pole had been moved a few thousand miles nearer, and that perhaps winter had escaped from captivity and was taking a little jaunt.

At Kansas City the thermometer registered 48 degrees.

A ROMANCE OF THE CIVIL WAR

War has its romance as well as tragedy. Indeed, novelists have always delighted to combine the two elements in framing their stories. A pretty and touching romance of this character is related by Capt. S. H. Hargis of this place.

While the Confederate army was encamped in the vicinity of Chattanooga he met a beautiful girl by the name of Parlana Dyer. Friendship soon ripened into love and she promised to give him her heart and hand when the war should come to an end and he was free from his duties as a soldier. Some of the fiercest fighting on the eventful days at Chickamauga took place around the Dyer home and Mr. Hargis found himself within a few yards of the home of his fiancée. When the fighting at Snodgrass Hill was hottest, the Confederates were startled to see two women break from the Union line and run towards their own. They reached the Confederate line in safety and just as they came up pulled off their bonnets, waved them and shouted: "Go it, brave boys." At this moment Mr. Hargis recognized one of the women as Parlana Dyer. Forgetting all else he urged her to get out of danger of the flying bullets with all haste. Looking at him with all the coolness of one who feared no danger she exclaimed, "Why, Sam, you are black as a negro," as indeed he was from the dirt and powder smoke. She wiped his face with her handkerchief and then sought a safer place.

Where she went the young soldier had no means of finding out. When the war closed he was in another part of the country and as his widowed mother and her family were badly in need of his help, he hastened back to Texas, and took up the struggle for existence. He wrote several letters to the girl who had promised to become his bride, but received no reply. Years passed and still no word from Parlana Dyer. However, during the succeeding half-century he never ceased to wonder what had become of her.

It was not until the recent reunion at Chattanooga that circumstances were such that he could return to the scene of conflict and his early romance. To find some trace of the girl was one of the controlling motives that led him back. On arriving at Chattanooga he and his son began to make diligent inquiry for people of the Dyer name, and finally their search was rewarded when a cousin of Parlana herself was found. He informed Captain Hargis that she had died shortly after the war, and that although the family had received his letters they thought it best to spare him the knowledge that she was no more. He also stated that she thought he could get the engagement ring given her fifty years before and if he succeeded would send it to the giver as a last memento of her who once wore it so proudly.

SOUTHERN MEMORIAL TO NORTHERN SOLDIER

Indiana, Ind., June 9.—Veterans of the Union and Confederate armies, with many other interested spectators, thronged the rotunda of the Indiana capitol building this afternoon and listened to addresses typifying the best patriotic feeling of both the North and the South. The occasion was one almost without precedent—the unveiling of a memorial erected by Confederate veterans in honor of a Union soldier. The memorial is a bronze bust of Colonel Richard Owen, who was the commander at Camp Morton in this city, where some 4,000 Confederate soldiers were confined after the capture of Fort Donelson by the Union forces. The movement to honor the memory of Colonel Owen was initiated by S. A. Cunningham, editor of the Confederate Veteran, of Nashville, Tenn., who was one of the prisoners at Camp Morton. The cost of the memorial, amounting to about $3,000, was contributed by other veterans who had been prisoners of war at Camp Morton and all of whom were pleased at the opportunity to manifest their gratitude to the commander who did everything in his power to make things more comfortable for them during their confinement.

The ceremonies at the unveiling of the memorial were of a brief but impressive character. Governor Ralston made the opening address of welcome. General Bennett H. Young of Louisville, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, made the address of presentation and Vice President Thomas R. Marshall accept-

The Daughter of David Kerr

(Copyright, 1923, by A. G. McHenry & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.
CHAPTER I—Gloria Kerr, a motherless girl who has spent most of her life at school, arrives at her father's home in Belmont. David Kerr is the political boss of the town and is anxious to prevent his daughter learning of his real character.
CHAPTER II—Kendall, representing the Chicago packers, is negotiating with Judge Gilbert, Kerr's chief adviser, for a valuable franchise. They fear the opposition of Joe Wright, editor of the reform paper.
CHAPTER III—Kerr asks the assistance of Judge Gilbert in introducing Gloria to Belmont society and promises to help him put through the packers' franchise and let him have all the graft.
CHAPTER IV—Gloria meets Joe Wright at the Gilberts. It appears they are on intimate terms, having met previously in a touring party in Europe.
CHAPTER V—Gloria twits Wright on his failure to keep an engagement to meet her in Paris. He explains that the death of his mother prevented his going to Paris.
CHAPTER VI—The Gilberts invite Gloria to stay with them pending the furnishing of the Kerr home.
CHAPTER VII—One society bud who refused to meet Gloria is forced to do so when her father is made to feel Kerr's power.
CHAPTER VIII—Wright begins his fight against the proposed franchise in the columns of his paper, the Belmont News.

"Huh! A beautiful lot o' airs she's got a right to put on," snorted the boss. "D'you know how old Loomis made his money?"

"Out of groceries, didn't he?"

"Groceries, nothin'. That's just a stall. He's got a warehouse chuck full of rotten whiskey he sells in prohibition Kansas. That's his real business. He don't sell enough groceries in a year to feed a first class boardin' house. I wouldn't let him sell anything to the poor farm. Don't let that girl o' his put it over you any. And they say he passes the plate in church! Gad, I hate a hypocrite. I'll make him sweat for it."

Her father was so wrought up that Gloria was afraid to speak further, but when he insisted she told of several instances of what she had been pleased to term antagonistic atmosphere, and in each case Kerr related some disgraceful characteristic of the head of the family. Once he did not hesitate to give his opinion of a society woman whose history he knew well. This intimate knowledge of Belmont affairs and his belittling references to leading citizens made Gloria reach the conclusion that in some way he was in a class by himself. This caused her to soothe him with the remark:

"Father, I think they're jealous because you're head and shoulders above them all."

She might not love him, but her pride in him and her loyalty to him were all the greater for the lack of love. She felt that she was at fault for not having that true filial regard which other daughters had for their fathers, and therefore whenever she could she strengthened her faith in him as Belmont's leading citizen. She was proud to be his daughter.

CHAPTER XI.
On the day of his interview with McMinistry Kerr had asked Kendall and Dr. Hayes to meet him at Judge Gilbert's office directly after luncheon. At this conference he intended to tell them they would have to acquire the News. The transfer of the property need not be made until after the election, but he wanted to know at once that it was his.

The boss was late, and the three men had to wait some time for him. "I wouldn't want the boys to know it," said Gilbert disconsolately, "but I'm afraid he's got us beat."

Kendall was hopeful still.

"It's three days till election," he urged. "Anything can happen in that time."

"I wish I believed in miracles like you do," was Dr. Hayes' rueful comment.

"Only a miracle can save us," added Judge Gilbert gloomily.

"I tell you, gentlemen," insisted Kendall, "I still think Dave Kerr can swing it."

"All the same," answered the coroner, "when I went out to stick my good money in real estate options on factory sites I wish I'd been riding Balaam's ass."

The others' laugh at his expense was cut short by the entrance of David Kerr.

"How 's it look, Mr. Kerr?" asked Gilbert.

"It might be worse," was the reply. "We count the votes, don't we?" Gilbert was not optimistic.

"I'm afraid it isn't going to be that close."

"Have you heard anything from the eleventh?" queried Kendall.

"I had a talk with Sweeney this morning, and he said he could put enough stock-yards people in the 'eleventh to deliver the ward all right."

Bauerschmidt was in my office at the same time. He's up against it in the sixth."

"Then we can't count on much outside the river wards," said Kendall.

Kerr nodded his head. He could have added that the river ward men would vote early and often, but that there was no occasion for it. It was an open secret that for several weeks floaters had been colonized in the levee district.

"We can't count on much besides them wards," explained Kerr, "unless the Belmont News goes out of business."

"What can we do about it?" inquired Hayes. He saw defeat staring them in the face.

"Sam," replied the boss after a moment's silence, "every man's got his price—in some form or other."

"News or no News, we've got to win," exclaimed Kendall desperately. "I've staked everything on it in Chicago and I must get results—and that means a franchise and nothing but a franchise."

"Then we've got to have that paper at any cost."

"It's mortgaged for all it's worth," said Gilbert.

"That won't help us in the next three days," snapped Kendall.

"There ain't no use mincing matters," concluded the boss. "We're up against it. There's only one thing to do; see what he'll sell for, and pay him his price."

Judge Gilbert looked at the matter from the point of view of a business lawyer.

"It won't be cash down for the whole thing. We merely assume the mortgage, and then pay him whatever he'll take to clear out."

Kerr had figured all this out. With him time was the most important consideration.

"We've got to get busy mighty quick," said the boss.

"When are you going to see him?" asked Kendall.

"Right away."

"We can't very well go to his office," said Gilbert. "Even that little move would give him more of an advantage."

"Get him over here," ordered Kerr. "Telephone him. He'll come. You needn't say who's here."

Judge Gilbert picked up the telephone on the table and asked Williams, his secretary, who sat in the outer office, to get Mr. Wright at the Belmont News on the line for him.

Judge Gilbert's offices consisted of an outer room where sat his secretary; within, where Kerr and his lieutenants were in conference, was the library, a large room looking out on the main thoroughfare of Belmont; and from this, opposite the outer reception room, then opened, two smaller rooms, one of which Gilbert used as his private office, the other as a room for consultations.

When Gilbert finished telephoning, he said, "He's busy going over the proofs of some late stuff for this afternoon's paper, but he'll be over in half an hour or so."

CHAPTER XII.
When Gloria found that the Presbyterian Mission was in need of money in order to extend its work, she suggested to Mrs. Hayes that they go among their friends, explain the situation and ask money for their charity. One of the first upon whom they called was Judge Gilbert. Williams explained that the judge was busy for a few minutes and asked them to be seated. He did not know if the men cared to be bothered with mere women on such a day.

When Williams announced that Miss Kerr and Mrs. Hayes wished to see him, Judge Gilbert asked Kerr if he knew the meaning of the visit.

"They got some sort o' mission work they're beginnin' for. It's just a polite shake down."

"I didn't know she had taken it up that seriously. I just thought she went down with Mrs. Hayes out of curiosity room, there opened two oisy."

"Women is queer creatures, Amos. Gloria's spendin' lots of her time with

Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Deen Lose Child.
At 3:30 Monday afternoon little Jewell, the two-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Deen, fell a victim to the grim reaper, Death. The funeral and interment were held at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the services being conducted by Rev. C. L. Brooks.

The parents did everything that human skill could suggest to save the life of their little one, but all to no avail. The little flower fell before the reapers scythe and the fond parents were left desolate.

TRIMM'S BARN BURNED TODAY
About 7 o'clock this morning A. T. Trimm, who lives near the brick kilns south of Ada, suffered a severe loss when his barn was destroyed by fire. He had a supply of feed that was ample for making his crop, but the last vestige was burned. Also all his harness and a saddle was destroyed.

Mr. Trimm says that the only way he can account for the fire is that a tramp possibly slept in the hay the night before and fired it while lighting a pipe, or that at sometime a match had been dropped and was struck by a rat.

Mr. Trimm is one of the best and most industrious farmers of Pontotoc county, and as his barn was well filled, his loss is one he feels keenly.

Class Day at Princeton.
Princeton, N. J., June 9.—Class day at Princeton, with its many gatherings in which the seniors played the leading parts today, proved to be one of the most interesting and delightful in years. Each of the departments of the university conducted services closely following the program which custom has established as most fitting for the occasion. Conspicuous among the features of the program were the cannon exercises, the planting of the class ivy, and the ivy oration, in front of Nassau Hall.

Cleans Blood Through Kidneys
A Most Important Function and One to be Carefully Guarded.

S. S. S. is a Wonder. It Makes You Look and Feel the Picture of Real Health.

The purpose of the kidneys being to filter the blood the question of treating supposed kidney weakness should be considered carefully. Instead of drugs and alleged kidney stimulants the better plan is to purify the blood with an antidotal effect such as you get from S. S. S.

It should be remembered that the kidneys are made up of a fine net work of blood vessels, and it is to stimulate the functional activity of kidney tissue through this capillary net work that S. S. S. shows one of its most remarkable effects.

The medicinal value of the components of S. S. S. is relatively just as vital to healthy kidney action as the nutriment obtained from grain, meat, fats, sugars, or any other part of our daily food is to the natural reconstructive requirements of the tissues. And there is one component of S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating the cellular tissues of the kidneys to a healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. Thus, in cases of rheumatism, cystitis, chronic sore throat, huskiness of voice, bronchitis, asthma, and the myriad of other reflex indications of weak kidney action, first purify your blood with S. S. S. so it will enable the tissues to rebuild their cellular strength and regain their normal health.

S. S. S. is prepared by The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any deep-seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Dept. for free advice. It will be worth your while to do so. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores.
